To Regina Kuecks-Morgan, Psychologist,

We, Wenceslao Gonzalez Jr. and Cibeles J. Gonzalez, the parents of Wenceslao Adonis Gonzalez III are writing to you because we have been denied by DCYF any representative role in our sons' lives since they arrived here from Spain. As a result of our exclusion from the decision making process pertaining to our sons' welfare, when ironically we are the only ones who can say with all honesty to desire their complete well-being, we felt it necessary to acquaint you with facts that possibly you were not aware of due to our voice being shut out, and DCYF's constant efforts to either downplay or totally conceal the role that our sons' half-sisters have played in their initial removal from Spain and deportation, as well as in the current behavior that our son Wenceslao manifests.

We do not know what (if anything) has been told to you of us. We know that as a result of your frequent contact with our child's half-sister during his sessions, it is very likely that anything which you might have heard of us may be of a negative nature. Sometimes the illusions of which a false reality is comprised are so complex that it makes the truth of what is really going on seem ridiculous, and thus not worthy of credibility in the eyes of many. Despite the risk of not being taken seriously by you, our love for our son, as well as our genuine concern about what is going on with him, compels us to at least make an attempt to explain to you the reality of our son's plight.

We understand, according to what DCYF has told us, and what we have read in some reports tainted by many falsehoods, that our eldest son has been diagnosed with Reactive Attachment Disorder and Global Developmental Delay, diagnoses which we know are erroneous.

Our statements may not have the prestige of a degree giving it weight, but they do have years of firsthand experience knowing how our son was prior to his removal, as well as an accurate understanding of the traumatic circumstances which he has been subjected to.

Furthermore, if the reality of our son's half-sister's motives were understood, as well as how she has been with him in the past, it would be easy to realize why it is irrational to believe that one can give therapy to change behaviors that are the result of conditioning that is being caused in the child by the very person who accompanies him to his sessions.

We of course understand and expect some skepticism towards our statements, as they seem to defy what you perhaps think to have observed. However, being aware of the level of authenticity of what one observes, surpasses in importance the observation made of it. For it is this awareness which bestows on any observation made, the necessary accuracy for it to be considered a valid conclusion.

We know of course that before you (as well as before the social worker) our son's half-sister will appear to be attentive to the child and kind, and it is precisely her extreme skill at being able to so successfully conceal her true feelings and motives that only serves to heighten our concern.

For we understand that part of our ability to be able to remove our sons from the harmful environment in which they are in, lies in being able to make others realize the very well disguised menace that our sons' half-sisters pose to their genuine well-being.

The reality is that our son's half-sister has been trying to label our son Wenceslao since 2006.

In December of that year, she falsely accused us in a then unsuccessful attempt to remove Wenceslao from our home. When confronted with her deed she never apologized and said that it was her father's fault that she had accused us because he did not visit her enough!

For years ,both she and her sister have made our life very difficult in a desperate attempt to destroy our marriage. They likewise (in a similar fashion) destroyed a previous marriage of their father's.

Our son's half-sister's intense desire to inflict a humiliating label on Wenceslao, with the intention of demeaning his intellectual capacity, arose when her father began to brag to her and her sister about what Wenceslao knew as a baby. In the 2006 accusation she was trying to pass him off as autistic despite having rarely seen him. It is important to understand that despite being adults, she and her sister felt displaced by Wenceslao's birth, and afterwards when his younger brother Galileo was born his half sisters did not even bother to mention Galileo's name for nearly a year, as if he did not exist.

Perhaps you may consider what we have just told you to be nonsense born out of spite, and may still have difficulty believing that under the demeanor which she shows before you such sinister intentions could exist, but we have evidence to back up what we say.

What we state, we do so because it is the plain truth, and the sooner that this truth is accepted the more quickly our son can be genuinely helped. If anyone has acted out of spite it is Wenceslao's half-sister, who has consistently sought to make us divorce and has shown envy towards our children, despite the fact that we have never meddled in her personal life nor have sought to ruin her own marriage.

Our son Wenceslao was not as he is now. His current behavior is the result of trauma and conditioning. He was a happy, loveable child before removal, who loved to learn and to be kissed and hugged, but for nearly two years (since December 19th 2008) he has been in environments that are totally devoid of affection, and has suffered (along with his younger brother) from severe Parent Alienation.

In Spain, he and his brother were obviously being abused from Dec 2008 to the beginning of April 2009 by whoever had them (though we only observed the constant bruises, shabby clothing, and constant illness from January 21st, 2009 to the beginning of April 2009, when their condition started to greatly improve all of a sudden). Now he continues to be in the unloving home of someone who secretly wants him to grow up in a broken home, as she and her sister once did when they were children.

We have good reason to believe that certain behaviors are being conditioned into our son in an attempt to make those very behaviors compatible with the conditions that our child's half-sister wants to see him labeled with. We have abundant evidence in photos and videos of how Wenceslao was before he was taken from us. We have sent you some information which will shed some light on the reality of our son's situation. We hope that you will peruse them with an open mind, and so hopefully come to the realization that what you see in Wenceslao is what others have engineered for you to see, and as a result is not truly indicative of how the child really is.

When situations are at fault , rather than the child, any harm done to the child is remedied by changing the situation, not the child (hence the child should not be labeled). If a child's unhealthy state is environmentally induced, then it is the environment that is the problem, not the child, so by changing the environment, that unhealthy state is not given the opportunity to further worsen, and steps can then be taken to reverse the negative trend towards a more positive direction that is conducive towards the total restoration of the child's pre-trauma and conditioning state.

We have requested study sessions with our sons over a month ago, but DCYF has totally ignored us. It was one of our many attempts to counteract the effects that their unnuturing environment has had on their learning. When we say unnuturing environment, we are of course referring to the emotional, spiritual, and intellectual factors that are not present in said environment. We are not referring to the material aspect of the environment, though despite appearances, the reality is that they had a better diet (organic food) and nicer looking clothing with us (judging from what we have observed on our visits).

Nevertheless, it is our sincere hope that having been provided with a better understanding of what the situation is, that the labels placed on our son Wenceslao be taken away, as they are the result of a chronic unawareness of what our son's situation has been for the last nearly two years, and how he really was prior to the commencement of that lamentable situation. We greatly appreciate any understanding and cooperation on your part.

Sincerely,
